Frequently asked Questions
#1

Do I need to provide the report cards and or grades?

No, the SFUSD will obtain the school records from your child’s current school. (If SFUSD is unable to obtain records, or if records are incomplete, the applicant’s family will be contacted)
#2
Is there an appeal process for students who are not accepted?

Lowell High school has an established admissions criteria for all, and therefore to preserve equity no appeals are accepted.
#3

Is there a Waitpool for Lowell? What happens when an accepted student declines the assignment?

No, there is no Waitpool. Approximately 850 students will be admitted for 650 seats. The over-enrollment is purposely included with attrition trends in mind. Typically, 150-200 students decline their Lowell assignment bringing the class down to the target size.
#4
Is there a sibling priority to attend Lowell?

No, all students are required to meet the admissions criteria.
I wish my child to attend Lowell, however, their sibling attends school (B). How can I assure if my child does not qualify for Lowell, that both children attend school together?

Lowell applicants with siblings at other high schools may list the sibling’s school in the order of preference. They need to indicate on the application that there is a sibling at one of the choices. A sibling tiebreaker will apply for the sibling’s school where ever it is listed.
#6
What happens if my child does not qualify for Lowell? Will this hurt their chances of getting another choice school?

If the student does not qualify for Lowell, the school will be removed from the list of choices and all other requests will be moved up in ranking on the preference list.
